MOODY HUES

27 This living space in Adelaide attests to the power of paint. In contrast to the home's bright, white, modern, open-plan rear extension, this room in the older section has been transformed with an inky grey wall treatment to become a cocooning haven where the owners can retreat to read and relax. Dark timber floorboards and tessellated tiles on the hearth speak to the period character of the 19th-century home, while rich velvets on the sofa and ottoman add voluptuous texture and colour. "Think gentleman's smoking room, without the smoke," says Antonietta Sofia.

DESIGN NOTES 27 Dulux Oolong (walls). Winckelmans porcelain tiles, Eco Tile Factory. Velvet sofa and ottoman. Vitra Noguchi coffee table.

28 Haymes Paint Faraway Sky (walls) and Greyology 2 (trims, ceiling, joinery). Curtains in Chivasso velvet and custom Grazia & Co chairs upholstered in Chivasso 'Boho Girl' velvet, both from Unique Fabrics. 29 Sofa, coffee table and side tables, all King Living. Rug, The Rug Collection.

CURTAIN TIME

28 The eclectic vibe of this revamped home office in Melbourne proves an inspiring spot to work in. Wedgwood-blue walls, lavish velvet curtains and a plush oval bamboo-silk rug build up layers of texture that frame a leadlight bay window. Floral velvet upholstery injects colour and personality, while a leather Timothy Oulton desk seat from Coco Republic lends vintage-style gravitas. "I love the furniture placement," says designer Camilla Molders. "The desk in front of the window with a chair is quite theatrical and sets the scene beautifully."

PALETTE PLEASER

29 Challenge accepted: to inject warmth and cosiness into this Melbourne living room via a monochrome palette. The larger-than-life sofa and chic accessories now draw a crowd, be it on weeknights or when weekends roll around. "It suits our everyday family lifestyle, yet easily lends itself to entertaining," say the owners. A glass coffee table provides substance without dominating the space, and lends a sculptural quality to this sizeable room. Custom joinery is practical for stowing the entertainment system and all the cords, cables and extras that come with it. ▶
